TRAVEL

WHEELING THROUGH ASIA

Hong Kong, with all its hills and harbours and crammed streets, is not the first place one would imagine might be accessible for a wheelchair-bound traveller.

Enter Sarah Fuller, Adelaide born and bred and for 17 years now a resident of Hong Kong. Sarah has produced a first in the Asian travel market: a guide to getting around Hong Kong for the independent wheelchair traveller.

"Arriving in a city can be daunting," she explains, "especially when it is your first visit. Having lived in Hong Kong for many years, I have travelled often with my father, who uses a wheelchair. I have experienced the challenges first-hand."

Wanting to provide the mass of useful information she had uncovered through her own research and practical experience, Fuller decided to put it all in book form, a task she admits was not without its own challenges. "I established Wheel Away Disabled Travel in Hong Kong so I could self publish a travel guide to one of the most exciting cities in Asia.

"I acknowledge that the disability experience is different for different people. I wrote this book due to my father's experience, but also wanted to share with others all the knowledge gained while preparing diverse, action-packed itineraries in both Hong Kong and around Asia, always ensuring access and ease. Hopefully my book can be the first of many, and inspire others to realise their dream to travel and see many of the amazing things I've been privileged to see."
